However, if upon such trial or such hearing the party against whom the allegation of adultery is made produces evidence tending to prove any of the defences thereto mentioned in Section 1,758 of this action, the other party is competent to testify in disproof of any such defence. A husband or wife shall not be compelled or without the consent of the other, if living, allowed to disclose a confidential communication made by one to the other during marriage."

far less evil would result from the ex-clusion of such testimony than from its admission. It may in individual cases work hardship, but the destruction of confidence between a hu-band and wife would cause much misery and affect the marriage relation. This rule is founded upon sound public policy. Those founded upon sound public policy. Those living in the marriage relation should not be compelled or allowed to betray the mutual trust and confidence which that relation implies. When modified by legislative enactment, no wider interpretation has been given than the plain letter of the law demanded and when by statute the disqualification was removed, allowing husband and wife to testify as against each other, and compelling them to testify, the rule attill obtained and did not affect the exclusion of privileged communications between the spouses under the common law rules.

It is applicable though terminated by divorce or by the death of one of the parties. Letters between husband and wife are within the protection of the rule as are oral communications, and the contents thereof cannot be disclosed unless the privilege is waived. (Bowman vs. Patrick, 32 Fed. Rep. 368; Hopkins vs. Grimshaw, 165 U. S., 342.)

"In the Rowman case the wife's ad-"In the Bowman case, the wife's administrator found among her papers letters from her hussand relating to matters in a suit in which he was then interested. "In the Hopkins case, Mr. Justices Gray, delivering the opinion of the court, on page 349 said: 'At common law, upon grounds of public policy, husband and wife (with some exceptions not here material) were not permitted even by consent to give evidence for or against each other or to testify, even after the ending of the marriage relation by death or divorce to rivate communications.

Reasons for His Ruling.

"In Milspaugh vs. Potter (62 Appellate Division 521), Mr. Justice Smith said, at page 524: There it was sought to prove a confession by the wife to the husband which is clearly within the protect on of the statute.'

"Judge Parker in Warner vs. The P. P. Co. (132 N. Y., f81) on page 185 said: The evidence oftered could have no purpose useful to the defendant unless it tended to show that during such a conversation with her husband she said or did, or omitted to say or do something from which it might be inferred that there existed an unlawful intimacy between her and Smith. A conversation on such a subject between husband and wife seems to us to be clearly within the protection of the statute.' "The appellant calls our attention to

Parkhurst vs. Berdell

(110 N. Y. 386-393), in which Judge Earl, in speaking for the court, said: What are confidentiar communications within the meaning of the section? Clearly not all communications made between husband and wife when alone. between husband and wife when alone.

They are such communications as are expressly made confidential, or are such as are of a confidential nature, or induced by the marital relations.

"Clearly the definition given does not exclude such a conversation as the defendant desired to prove from the protection of the statute. Its nature was not only confidential, but it was apparently induced by the marital relation, for it example to conceived that such a tople would have been the subject of discussion but for the existence of such relation between the parties.

characterizing the nature of the convergations sought to be excluded in that case. He said: They were ordinary conversations relating to matters of business which there is no reason to suppore he would have been unwilling to hield in the presence of any person.

"It cannot be supposed that both husband and wife would have heen willing to discuss such a subject in the presence of other persons or would have consented to a repetition of the conversation by either party to it. Its nature and the relation of the parties forbade the thought of its being told to others, and the law stamps it with that seal of confidence which the parties in such a situation would feel no occasion to exact."

"In Hanor vs. Flousel (128 Appellate Division 801) said Mr. Justice Sewell in Page 803: 'It is equally clear that he Court did not err in excluding the affidavit of the wife, or that part of the conversation between her and the plaintiff which tended to show that the defendant had had criminal intercourse with her. They were not only confidential but they were apparently induced by the marital relation and clearly within the prohibition of Section $31 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides that "a husband or wife shall not be compelled, or without the consent of A BOLIAN HALL, This Affernoon, April
